Charlie Chaplin in "The Circus"

HES BACK AGAIN! In the greatest show of mirth—the picture you've been waiting for! Charlie, king of comedy, back again—still smiling and smiles ahead of them all! Right, this way to the big show! See the greatest collection of laughs, gags and giggles ever assembled under one canvas! Freaks, fun and frolic—they're all here! All right, professor, strike up the band! The show is about to begin! Folks, step this way!

We want every child from 5 to 60 years to see this picture.

COMING MONDAY, (THANKSGIVING) "THE BIG PARADE"

Here at last is the picture that has captured the heart of the world. Not drama only—rather Life—splendid, mean, funny, horrible, ugly, beautiful, heroic, rapturous. Five million people have marched to see it, and it has just begun. THE MIRACLE FILM OF LOVE AND WAR.

Note The Big Parade will also be shown Wednesday, Nov. 14th.

Curlers Anticipate Successful Season

A meeting of the Curling Club was held in W. C. Hoskins' store on Tuesday evening. While there was only a small attendance those present were enthusiastic with regards to the prospects for the season. The secretary's report showed the financial situation to be quite satisfactory and a committee was appointed to interview the local oil well regard to arrangements for the season's operations. Adjournment was made to Tuesday evening, November 13th, to organize for the season and elect officers and skips. In the meantime Messrs. Orr and Henderson will list those desiring to curl this year. As the attempt to form too many rinks in past years has resulted unsatisfactorily the number will be limited to eight rinks and only after these are permanently filled will others be formed. Please have your name to either of the above named if you wish to join the club this year.

Thanksgiving Monday, Nov. 12

Thanksgiving Day occurs this year on Monday, November 12, which will also be observed as Armistice Day. The day has been announced at Ottawa as a Dominion holiday and has been gazetted in each of the provinces to make the observance general throughout Canada.

McDougall Bros. Win at Calgary

Neither frost, hail or rust interfered with the crop of pure bred cattle and sheep grown by McDougall Bros. this year as the following results of their visit to the Calgary Stock Show and Sale recently. Champion has always had occasion to be proud that the McDougall's are located in this district and as the years pass by the prominence they bring to the district is added to with a regularity that is remarkable, to say the least, and the fame they are achieving in the show ring will always be reflected on the entire community. Two championships are included in the list which follows:

NOTES AND COMMENT.

Alberta acquired 11,000 new settlers in the past six months, being third from the top in comparison with the provinces in the Dominion, Manitoba and Ontario coming second.

The police looked over the town again on Saturday night but failed to locate any game of chance running illegally. Charges against those summoned as the result of the first raid were dismissed on Thursday, no evidence to convict being available.

When one considers the wonderful plans for the bettering of conditions brought forward in every political campaign, it seems peculiar that there is anything left to improve if a fractional part of the promises and plans were carried out as the result of previous campaigns.

The continued prosperity of Western Canada will result in the establishment of branches of English manufacturing concerns in the near future according to press dispatches. This will be growth along very desirable lines. Manufactured goods at any more reasonable prices would aid largely in prolonging the prosperous period.

While some difficult problems have presented themselves in the use of combines for wheat harvesting there is no doubt that the combine has come to stay. Several operators in this district have had an unusually successful season with their combines and practically every machine in the field has proved the economical possibilities of the combine as compared to the binder and threshing machine.

To judge by the amount of machinery moved to the main street on Hallowe'en night there must be a tremendous amount of energy concealed in the youth of the town. If this surplus activity could be turned to account in some useful direction mountains could be moved if necessary. It is very doubtful, however, if an equal amount of work could be dragged to the surface for any other purpose.

The Alberta government has in view the reorganization of the inspection of departments, an effort being made to prevent overlapping. The provincial police will be used more largely in this way than has been the case in the past.

An investigation into the mixing of grain at terminals will begin at once. Hon. Chas. Dunning has been in England for some time looking into complaints on the part of millers as to the quality of wheat they received and as a result has recommended a complete investigation of the milling situation.

Early action in the farm loans scheme is being urged upon the Dominion government by Alberta interests, who expect farmers in parts of the province where the crop was poor will wish to take advantage of this form of credit.

With so many people flocking to this province for the harvest there is scarcely a possibility that many bad actors will not be included, and prevalence of crime, especially in the way of printing, though from the outside it looks very much as though any benefit to the farmer from the high impositions on farm products were more than offset by the tariff on manufactured goods. The fact that other measures than tariff regulations are admittedly necessary to save farm interests across the line would not lead anyone to copy the tariff method of improving the standing of the farmers.

Taains Operating Northern Extensions

Train service has been augmented on the new fifteen-mile extension of the Central Canada railway from White-law to Fairview, formerly known as Waterhole, an order authorizing the commencement of the service having been signed on Saturday last by Hon. V. W. Smith, Minister of Railways, following an inspection made by members of the department. Construction work is also being pushed rapidly toward completion on the twenty-five-mile extension of the E. D. and B. C. to Hythe, and it is expected that this line will be in operation within a short time.

Salt Strike Made At Waterways

An important discovery in indicating the wealth of resources in the northern part of Alberta is announced in the striking of a deep bed of salt in the test well being drilled at Waterways under the direction of the Provincial Department of Railways. Salt was encountered at a depth of 670 feet and the drill which has now reached the depth of 883 feet is still passing through this formation. Further tests are planned to determine mine the probable extent of these valuable salt deposits.

Co-op. Institute Proved Successful

Plans for next year's program of co-operative activities under the auspices of the Wheat Board Surplus Fund trustees were discussed at a meeting held recently in Edmonton. Satisfaction was expressed with the results of the Alberta Institute of Co-operation held during the past season and it is proposed that during the summer of 1929 a number of smaller meetings of a similar nature be held at various points in the province.

British Boys Being Farm Trained

Some 200 young British farmers are expected to come to Alberta early next summer, according to an announcement just made by Hon. George Headley, Minister of Agriculture. The first group will arrive about April 1 and will be followed by the remainder a month later. Arrangements are being made to give these boys a month's intensive training at the agricultural schools at Vermilion, Olds and Claresholm and as they will have received some preliminary instruction in Canadian farming methods before leaving the old country, they will then be in a position to start work at once on farms in the province.

The Menace of Communism

The Sixth International Communist Congress held in Moscow this year declared its chief policy "to concentrate Communist propaganda on the people and the world," not on the young people of Russia, or even of Europe, but of the world.

Has that declaration any meaning for Canada? Is it one that the people of Canada need pay any attention to, or in regard to which they should take action?

Communism thrives where there is oppression, injustice, extreme poverty, lack of employment resulting in enforced idleness, and inevitably arising from these conditions, general discontent. Satan still finds mischief for idle hands to do, and there is nothing quite so mischievous in the world today as Communism and its many pernicious doctrines.

Communism, therefore, found fertile ground in Russia owing to the centuries old oppressions and injustices of the old Tsarist regime during which the people were compelled to work for the benefit of the few at the expense of the people alongside an aristocracy ruling in wealth and indulging in all forms of extravagance and luxury. The added sufferings, sacrifices and horrors of the Great War were all that was necessary to set the country afire and provide the Communists with the opportunity they had long been awaiting.

In Canada, unlike Russia, there is no oppression of the people; injustice is not tolerated, and has only to be exposed to be remedied; cases of extreme poverty are rare indeed, and, when found, sympathetic governments, organizations and people respond to the call of need; work, as a rule, is available to all who are willing to work, and seasons of unemployment are but temporary and generally self-limiting; the overwhelming mass of the people are happy and contented. The soil of Canada is, therefore, not fertile ground for cultivation by the Communist agitators.

Nevertheless, Canada is not being ignored by the Communists of Russia in their visionary attempt to grasp world power through the overthrow of all institutions of law and order, all religions, the destruction of all present forms of government, and the elimination of every other right of individuality. Communism will never be satisfied until it has brought about a reign of terror. And a condition of alarm in all countries similar to that created by him in Russia and in certain portions of China. Wherever there is trouble, whether political, social or economic, there the Communists find opportunity, and in the past Canada has not been free from manifestations of Communism, and the police authorities have been compelled to act in accordance with the demands of the Communists and their agents.

The Communist leaders realize, however, that they cannot make much headway with the adult populations of Canada, the United States, and the self-governing Dominions of the British Commonwealth. Hence their openly avowed intention to concentrate their propagandist activities on "the young people."

And therein lies the danger to Canada. If in their youth while their minds are plastic and open to receive impressions, and before their characters are formed, the boys and girls of Canada, or of any country, can be inoculated with the virus of Communist disbelief in God and religion, Communism's reputation of accepting ideas of man as the most important man-made restriction on individual liberty, and the rebellion against all constitutional systems of government and courts of law and justice, and Communist doctrine that there is nothing good but everything that is bad in all countries except Russia, where, for the time being, Communists holds the whip hand and wields a lash over everyone who dares to voice even the mildest criticism of Communism, we can see that the future of Canada can be infected with many ideas on the very foundations of all our beliefs and reveres and hold dear in Canada today are being very seriously undermined.

Communism is conducting such a campaign in Canada at the present time. The orders of the International Congress, at Moscow, are being carried out to the letter. Community day schools and Soviet Sunday schools are being opened in the most populous cities, and the children are being indoctrinated and every conceivable effort to attract the interest of the children is adopted and followed. In a age when there is a youthful tendency to scoff at religion as old-fashioned, God, the church, and all religion is openly as well as covertly attacked. Modern youth is encouraged to "go the limit" in throwing off the conventions and restraints of the past, and are ridiculed if they do not do so. The sanctity of the home is laughed at, and parental as well as all other forms of authority repudiated as forms of slavery and denial of the rights of youth.

The campaign is highly dangerous. It is an insidious campaign, and therein lies its greatest danger because it is so frequently difficult to locate and combat it. But it must be fought and dragged into the open for the ugly work of truth, grief and suffering prepared for parents and children alike, for the church, and the state.

In setting their faces sternly against this diabolical thing, let the Canadian people see to it that no oppression, no injustice, no suffering through poverty or because of lack of work is allowed anywhere in the Dominion. Let the churches forget their narrowness of doctrine or inaction of years past, and begin again to unite their efforts so that effective warfare may be waged on a system which, if it is not destroyed, will ultimately destroy all churches and all religion, and, in destroying these great bulwarks, destroy also the home and the state, and lead to the damnation of the individual.

Big Demand For Sheep

British Columbia Owners Shipping Thousands To Market

Along with the vastly improved position and prospects of grain farmers, beef cattle men in British Columbia, who held on during lean years, are finding a new market. Sheep Farmers as usual are on velvet sheep. There have been a consistently good belt in British Columbia for years, and appear likely to remain so. Herd Breeds, with 130 per cent. increase from the lamb crop are shipping between three and four thousand head to market and retaining around one thousand ewe lambs for breeding stock. The demand for sheep is strong and, with more and more farmers getting into the game on a big scale and generally turning their attention to sheep in small numbers, the temptation to sell is almost irresistible.

Oil Shale and Tar Sands

Vast Resources Located in Martilines and in Alberta

Canada has vast resources of oil shale and bituminous sands the latter in Ontario, Quebec, and the Maritimes, and the latter in Alberta. These deposits have long been considered as potential sources of products generally obtained from crude petroleum. As a result of recent modifications in refinery methods, however, they may now be seriously considered as sources, to be drawn upon when needed, to help in supplying the rapidly increasing demand for motor fuel.

Canadian Arctic Expedition

Well on the Way To Frozen North, Equipped With Radio

An example of the use of Canadian products by the Canadian Government in scientific and exploration work comes with the departure of the Ogawa of the Canadian Arctic Expedition, organized by the Northwest and Yukon Branch of the Canadian Department of Mines in Ottawa.

The expedition was under the direction of Major L. T. Burwash, well known Canadian Governmental explorer, who has spent much time in the far North. Press reports this summer indicated that Major Burwash was off on his 100-day jaunts, but the general Canadian Arctic Expedition, according to information from Toronto, left that city in three parties.

All three parties were equipped with wireless sets, and these were on the sets supplied for the expedition by the Department of Marine and Fisheries. Word has reached headquarters of the Canadian National Carbon Company that all branches of that Department are using Canadian National Carbon Company products.

Reports this summer on Major Burwash's activities indicate he was engaged in experiments designed to yield a product which promises to yield also an abundance of romance. He plans a jaunt of 5,000 miles by railroad, boat and dog team leading him at the magnetic pole, a trip leading him partly to the Arctic. One of the Arctic expeditions of Sir John Franklin which ended in disaster in 1847.

Rumor sifting back occasionally from the Arctic regions has told the tale of Franklin's two ships, the Erebus and the Terror, may be sighted in the Arctic Ocean near King William Land or Boothia Peninsula. If the ship can be found the Canadian Government will be enabled by the records of the expedition and records before him to be afloat to be heard aboard.

Major Burwash also plans to investigate conditions among the Eskimos north of Mackenzie and Keewatin, before he returns to the south from Wager Bay on the West Coast of Hudson Bay to Cockburn Bay south of King William Land.

One of the primary purposes for the expedition assigned by the government is to determine the downward shift of the magnetic pole so that Mariner's charts may be corrected.

"Can I cook?" repeated Andy. "I ask you can I cook? That's me first name though. I mean, I've cooked until now, I mean, I've been cooking in camps, in the Army, and I did thirty days in Sydney jail, and blame me if they didn't make me eat cook. I was so good they wanted me to stay."

"I'm not bad," said Andy, "but I can't tell you to meet Dad, Donald, and we'll find out when we are to start."

Andy patted his stomach contentedly. "Well, I think this here champagne makes me sort of want to start in 'ere and have a drink and a fight in every bar from 'ere to Cordova Street. About meetin' you Donald," he added scratching his head reflectively. "I don't feel right now. I think by tomorrow morning you'll find me in the bridal-chamber of the Vancouver Hotel." Saying which, with straightened shoulders, his head set at a characteristic angle, he swaggered off, shouting over his shoulder, "I wonder if his hand disappeared into the swinging door of the first saloon. In his present mood Andy envied no millionaire."

"I'm not bad," said Douglas, as he ran up the steps of the big office building. "He's rather severe looking and pretty straight-laced, but the face he wears in the office isn't the face he wears at home." He finished with a smile.

Robert Rennie was the sole owner of the Rennie Construction and Logging Company, one of the largest organizations of its kind on the Coast. He was resting from his chair and came around the desk to the white studying Donald's face, which showed unmistakable traces of the afternoon's fight.

"Dad, this is Donald McLean, whom I told you about last night. I don't want to trouble you, but I just wanted you to meet Donald and find out when we can start on the trip to the mountains."

"Now that Gillis is here to go with you, you can go any time; the soon-first real job, and I am going to make good," declared Douglas stoutly.

"I hope so, Douglas. As you know, I want you to work your way up on your own merits. I'm not going to show any favoritism. We are going to put in a larger mill in Chehalis and one at Summit Lake, so there will be good opportunities for advancement for you and McLean if you show the right spirit."

"Mr. McLean is going with you?" interposed Janet in a casual tone. "Yes."

"How can he leave his business for so long?"

"He's not actively engaged in business at present," explained Doug glibly.

"You might ask him out to dinner tonight. I might have a few friends in for the evening."

Donald accepted Janet's invitation with alacrity. Living within four walls of a room and eating in restaurants long since passed on his taste.

"Formal or informal?" he asked.

Douglas made a deprecating gesture. "Formal, we'll formalize it. You don't know Janet on who wouldn't like that question. My sister is a stickler for ceremony. How are you off for soup and fish?"

"I have the necessities," smiled Donald.

Douglas spent more than the usual time in dressing. He stood before the small mirror and surveyed himself with a critical eye. "Pretty soft for a man," he said. "I'll have to wear a suit. 'Man! man!' he exclaimed, as he pumped Donald's hand vigorously.

"That was a great fight today! When you got Garrieson with your left in the second round, I thought you were dead. I—I—heaven, I—I was excited!" He was gazing at Donald with admiration glowing in his eyes.

"You—you were there!" gasped Donald.

Robert Rennie chuckled. "Top row—higher heaven! When that brute took you I think I could have shot him!"

Mrs. Rennie met them at the door and greeted Donald warmly. He could not repress a start as he noted her likeness to Janet, and when she said she had been thinking of her son as she dined at home. She led him to a large room flanked by two enormous bays that looked out on the Avenue. There was a spaciousness in all the rooms, a rare combination of beauty and good taste in the furnishings, that were surpassing in elegance, but for their mineral-filled rocks and forest-clad hills. Our bay-sails and streams are filled with fish, and our climate is so mild that one can live in comfort amid congenial surroundings the year round."

"Here we have the last of the Great West," continued Mr. Rennie. "With nearly four hundred thousand square miles of territory, an area seven thousand miles in length, our population for the entire Province is less than one of the Coast cities to the south of us. Here in this vast country there is a wide range of terrain, from the high valley, miners to unlock the vast hoards of gold and copper; and loggers to fell the virgin forests."

"Some day—and that day will come—there will be railroads from Vancouver to the Echirng Sea." The speaker's face was flushed and his eyes were glowing.

"Who knows?" he finished dreamily, "but what the railroad I am building will do for Alaska road to the future?"

"Here is a family," thought Donald, "all native born, who have a deep and abiding faith in the destiny of the land of their birth."

Addressing Mr. Rennie, he said: "If the love that you and yours have for this Province is typical of the average citizen, I see no need to fear for the future of your country."

At the breakfast table next morning Douglas was talking happily of their departure for Summit Lake. He was leaning back in his chair, his feet propped up, his hands clasped and his head bent, while Donald's face, which had shown the unmistakable traces of the afternoon's fight, was now pale and wan.

"Dad, this is Donald McLean, whom I told you about last night. I don't want to trouble you, but I just wanted you to meet Donald and find out when we can start on the trip to the mountains."

"Don't worry, Dad. This is my room from the table. Let us have our coffee served there. The light will be gone by the time we get there."

As they ascended the stairs Donald gave his host a grateful look, which Mr. Rennie returned understandingly. The instant cemented an instant friendship. It Donald's heart for this broad-minded Western millionaire.

From the eminence of the tiny roof garden of the City Club, above the streets, lay at their feet. To the north the mountains were invested with a mystic blue haze, through which towered the snow-clad peaks. To the west lay the curving white sands of English Bay, and to the east, across the air of the long British Columbia twilight, they could see the strong mountainous profile of Vancouver Island.

"The topography of our City," explained Robert Rennie, "is very much like that of New York on Manhattan Island. The Narrows are deep enough for the largest ship afloat, and the inlet—a veritable inland sea—has unlimited room for docks."

"The name 'Narrows' seems a fitting name for such a magnificent spot," observed Donald.

"It was yesterday that one of our public-spirited citizens suggested the name 'ions' Gate,'" he said.

"Oh, Dad, that would be lovely!" exclaimed Janet, her eyes shining.

"It was yesterday that one of our public-spirited citizens suggested the name 'ions' Gate,'" he said.

"Yes," concurred Douglas, "canadas being one of the Lions' whips, what more appropriate name than 'ions' Gate' as the natural gateway to the British Empire?"

"The Castle was wonderfully kind to him in his adoption of mountains," said Robert Rennie. "He thinks that that last round was a whirlwind. That right you landed on his jaw—got so excited that I fell down between the seats and skinned my thumb." He rubbed his leg ruefully.

"You're a real fighter," said Janet.

"The two of you are perfect," said Janet.

WORLD HAPPENINGS BRIEFLY TOLD

Robert Bell, president of the Press Congress of Canada, has announced that the next session of the congress will be held at Ottawa, Ont., in July, 1929.

An all-red route around the world is seen as a strong possibility in the future, known by J. A. Wilson, controller of civil aviation, who has returned after spending two months in the British Isles.

C. Lee, it is announced will succeed Kow Kwo Yen as consul-general for China in Canada following the request of the latter who desires to return to his native land after four years residence in the Dominion.

The Rev. R. G. Scott, Anglican minister, who was associated with the late Dwight L. Moody for nearly 20 years, is dead in his home in Ashville, N.C., in his 73rd year.

England's first demonstration of television pictures took place recently when the British Broadcasting Corporation successfully transmitted a portrait of King George 100 miles from the Daventry experimental station to Manchester.

The honor of having been the first woman to graduate from the ranks of the Syria clubs in Canada went to Winnipeg, whose first lady member, Miss Eileen Magill, was passed upon by the civil aviation branch of the Department of National Defence.

Canadian Defense has been in the sharp racing country of the Canadian Rockies getting local color for a new novel. Miss Osteso is planning a trip to Europe this autumn, and will visit many other countries, Northern and Southern, which her parents came to Canada.

Using the airplane from which Alred Lowenstein, the Belgian financier, fell into the English Channel and was killed, last July 4, a party of department heads of the Department of National Defence, left England for Africa on the first real big game hunt. The airplane had been thoroughly overhauled and refitted.

Light Beam Produces Music

Expert Could Stop Sound By Blocking Light With His Hand

A narrow beam of light cast about an assembly room in the Hotel Biltmore, at Atlanta, Georgia, was controlled by a hand and under complete control at the will of John Belamy Taylor, consulting engineer of the General Electric Company at Schenectady, N.Y.

The demonstration, given before the American Institute of Electrical Engineers, was made possible through a complicated apparatus by which electrical impulse is controlled by the beam of light, and represented what Mr. Taylor called "narrow casting."

The instrument used in the demonstration is known as a photo-phone, built on old principles, Mr. Taylor said, but utilizing the perfected photo-electric tube electric pickup and newly developed amplifiers and sound reproducers.

The instrument consists of a photograph with an intricate electrical attachment used in producing the music. The electrical energy was sent over a light beam and transformed into repeating dimensions, which reproduced across the room, music and sound was the result. When Mr. Taylor would hold up his hand in the path of light the music would stop, and as he allowed the light to filter through his fingers the music increased in volume.

THOUSANDS OF MOTHERS USE NO OTHER MEDICINE

Baby's Own Tablets Are the Ideal Remedy For Babies and Young Children

Canadian mothers are noted for the care they give their little ones—the health of the baby is most jealously guarded. They are the ones who look for the lookout for a remedy which is efficient and at the same time absolutely safe. One of the best known remedies found such a remedy in Baby's Own Tablets and many of them use nothing else. Among them is Mrs. Howard Truro, N.S., who says: "I can state from personal knowledge that mothers of young children are known to nothing to equal them for effectiveness."

Baby's Own Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at $1.50 a box from the Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Carmangay Wins

At Basketball

The game held at the school last Saturday afternoon was regarded by the spectators to be both interesting and good.

The Carmangay squad started off with a bang and playing that showed great spirit. They had a score 19-21 at the end of the first quarter.

In the second quarter the home team rallied and by good combination and heavy checking the score became 10-10.

Following the five-minute rest the Champion boys came back with the same vigor, and made the score read 10-8.

A tense feeling was felt by the spectators as the game went on. The home team played with great skill and picked the strongest man from the Champion boys and took their places. It was a fast period of combination and guarding. Champion played its guards well up towards the center and they worked fine with the forward.

Carmangay were fighting with all their power to stop the combination of the home squad.

With a minute to go, Champion made a fine man-guard, the ball which ended with a shot, tying the score 10-10.

An overtime period was required to play off the tie. Carmangay then came into the limelight, cleverly breaking up the home combination and an acute shooting, broke the tie and won the game.

The game was extremely clean, with only two personal fouls on both sides. The referee Miller of Carmangay knew the game well and makes very just decisions.

These teams which are so evenly matched, will play at Carmangay next week, November 13, at 8 p.m. in the same hall.
